

doggyduty.pet: before and after

● Original

● ReDoWebs redesign

What this is

ReDoWebs crawled the live doggyduty.pet site, extracted a structured content blueprint, and generated a modern redesign with an agentic LLM loop. The following pages compare the two section by section, from full-page captures at 1900 px width (original captured live from doggyduty.pet).

At a glance

- Page length: 10,780 px to 8,859 px (18% shorter) for the same content.
- Structure: 13 content blocks split by yellow dividers become 7 clearly labelled sections, each with a headline and short intro.
- Kept intact: services, product features, warranty, phone, email and Orlando service area; the redesign reuses the site's own photos and graphics.
- Visual system: the brand's orange and yellow carried into rounded cards, icons, badges and a consistent button style.
- Conversion: Request Service and the phone number are visible in the first screen; the form gains labels and a reassurance line.

Sections

Header and hero

● Original

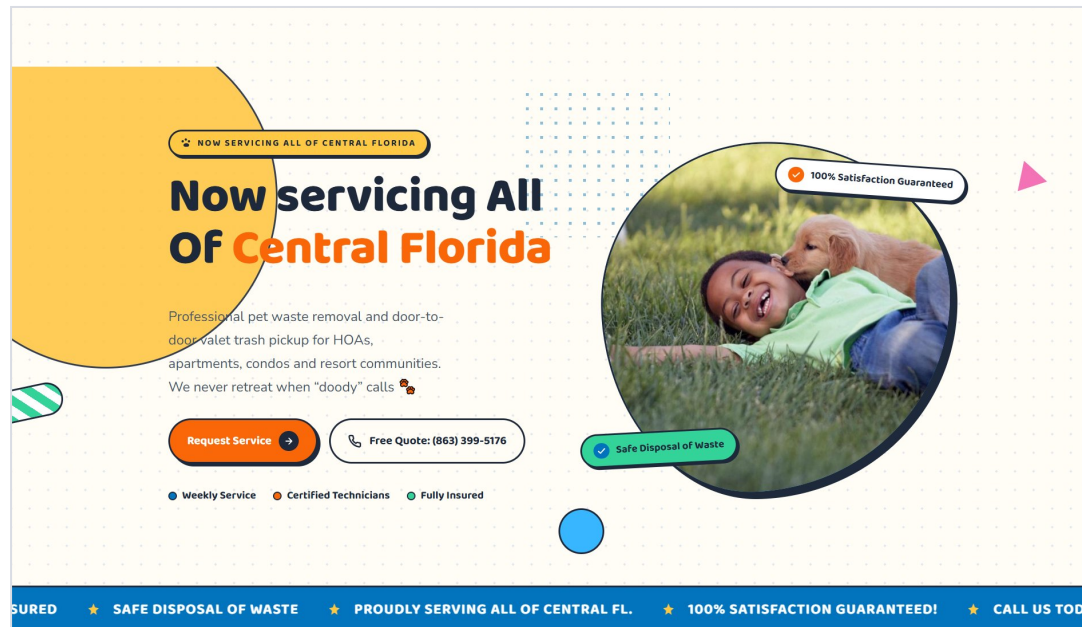

Original

- Logo, a slogan line and four nav links in a white bar.
- A full-width dog photo with the brand name, the tagline "Elevating communities one waste station at a time!" and five blue service pills.
- No button in the hero: the first call to action sits further down the page.

Redesign

- The slogan becomes the H1: "Now servicing All Of Central Florida", with a one-line value statement.
- Two calls to action side by side: Request Service and a free-quote button carrying the phone number.
- Trust badges (Weekly Service, Certified Technicians, Fully Insured), a hero photo and a scrolling trust strip.

Original

- Services are split across the page: an HOA paragraph with a "First hands free dog waste station" graphic near the top, then a second pet-waste paragraph and a full-width photo band with a grey "Professional Pet Waste Removal Service" box.
